PHOTOGRAPHY COMPETITION:

SDGs: WHAT SHOULD BE THE ROLE OF 'DEVELOPED NATIONS'?

11th March 2017
University of East London
Docklands Campus
London, UK

A photography competition; but why?

Pictures in all forms are certainly powerful however its photographs that tell the story that is most similar to the realities of the world. This is a conference based around pieces of writing however images cannot be left out of the equation they are an extremely useful tool to engage the whole population as an image can spark a multitude of emotions and stimulate unification and interdependency. They are able to grasp a moment in time and it to become a memory throughout history.

What does it consist of?

Essentially the image is to act as an argument in a paper would. The idea behind this is to capture your angle or perception of the topic of the conference through an image and to be able to recognise and explain why you think the image displays the reasoning for your argument. For example if you think heavy involvement from developed countries is necessary then highlight evidence (an image) to present the reasoning behind your argument.

Why get involved?

It's a great opportunity to apply your thoughts and knowledge you have gathered over the years about issues surrounding global development and for once not write them onto paper but to challenge yourself and create a snapshot that represents the perspective you align yourself with regards to the conference title. In previous years people have encountered the same issue and that is that you have the restriction of one photograph per person or team and have preferred the large word count instead.

Requirements:

- Individuals and teams both able to participate
- One image per individual or team

- The image has to be taken or directed by yourself or your team (no copied image off the internet, we will check)
- It needs to be related to the title and will need a short explanation to explain how it is so for the purpose of clarity.
